

Biography:

Barry Wallace

Range Mgt. Degree, University of Arizona 1968

1968-1980 Range Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service in Arizona, California and Nevada.

1980 to present Vegetation Mgt. Specialist dealing with large scale aerial applications of brush contracts in the Western U.S.

Provided oversight and supervision on over 3,000,000 acres of aerial application contracts.

Application Techniques for Grassland Restoration

A synopsis of a four year research study on the effects of aerial application on Velvet Mesquite In Southeast Arizona. A discussion of the importance of grassland restoration using these techniques. A description of the project area, methods of treatment and pricing evaluations. Outline of the funding sources and it's comparison to the New Mexico grassland restoration program. A comparison of the pricing and advantages of the various techniques. Pro and cons of fixed wing vs helicopter applications.

New opportunities for small scale brush treatment projects. A further discussion matching application equipment to project size, configuration and complexity.

Barry Wallace
Vegetation Mgt. Specialist
Crop Production Services
602-558-4380
Barry.wallace@cpsagu.com